this dissertation has shown that indeed the internationalization of production systems and the globalization of the markets for goods services and capital have triggered and intensified the competition between corporate governance systems similar to the competition in other economic areas where for example domestic goods and factor prices tend to converge to the world prices after opening to international competition over the years the traditionally diverse corporate governance systems have become more homogeneous the elements provisions and aspects where convergence has made more progress are boards form and functions strong minority shareholders rights universal banking systems bankruptcy law the capital market as an important corporate financing source investor oriented accounting standards e g ifrs and employee ownership as a means to motivate staff to undertake firm specific investments however convergence does not mean that the national systems have equally moved towards each other rather the principal agent model followed by the usa has prevailed the main reason for the dominance of the principal agent model seems to be the preponderance of the us economy particularly on global financial markets although this is not a topic of this dissertation in the last two decades a competition between capital market and bank centered financial systems can be observed the capitalmarket centered financial system recommended by the principal agent model has gained importance whereas the traditional leading position of credit institutions has impressively decreased discussing the civilizatory crisis and processes of refeudalization this volume brings into dialogue two of the most creative approaches in olaf kaltmeier and edgardo lander to rethink capitalism in the 21st century in part 1 olaf kaltmeier takes issue with the state of social inequality in the region highlighting the concentration of wealth within the upper 1 of society in latin america comparing the current economic situation with the ancient regime the discussion centers around the new phenomena like billionaires as president increased luxury consumption an emerging culture of distinction and the intensification of land and spatial segregation in part 2 lander urgently assesses the current state and political legacy of the pink tide governments in his essay crisis of civilization reviewing the past two decades of the new millennium lander critiques the failure of these governments to provide alternatives to extractivism and economic dependencies finally hans jürgen burchardt connects the arguments through interviews where both authors sum their efforts to open the issues to future dialogue refeudalization in latin america provides an accessible and thought provoking political diagnosis from the global south which departs from the oft idiosyncratic and cyclical debates of the global north to offer new vocabulary for social change it will interest scholars and students of global studies sociology and political science
